PREFACE.

In watching the development of language in normal children it is observed that so soon as a child has fairly passed the first or listening stage and has entered the language-using stage that a large part of its oral expressions are in the form of question and answer. The child replies to the questions asked by parents and playmates and in turn plies them with incessant interrogations. A step farther and the child rehearses what he has been told and the questions he has been asked. The modern methods of teaching foreign languages take cognizance of these suggestions of nature and employ the language to be acquired in multitudinous questions and answers on subjects connected with the familiar events of daily experience.

The successive chapters of this book are intended to furnish a large amount of such language exercises. The basis of the work is an article by Mrs. Anna C. Hurd, originally published in the American Annals for the Deaf in April of 1902, which gives a carefully prepared outline of constructions using the verbs to ask, to say, and to tell.

The employment of pictures suggesting clearly to the child's mind situations and subjects for conversation will be found most helpful in the effort to aid pupils in mastering these intricate changes in the use of direct and indirect discourse. It is our hope that this little book may prove useful to teachers of foreign languages and to teachers of the deaf.

CAROLINE A. YALE.

INTRODUCTION.

"To write and read," said Dogberry, "comes by nature," a belief so delightful in its charming simplicity that we accept with a sigh our inability to share it. In justice to Dogberry it is only fair to assume that he was never called upon to teach the subject of direct and indirect discourse to a class of deaf children. So far it is from coming "by nature" that the most careful and systematic of oral teaching needs the reinforcement of written practice. This supplementary work has been prepared and hektographed from day to day, the sentences used being suggested largely by schoolroom occurrences. In the effort to secure more variety and naturalness of expression, pictures were introduced, the people in them named, and their imaginary conversations used for the written lessons.

The following pages contain one set of such hektographed lessons and are designed simply for practice work, being so arranged that when a written exercise on any construction is needed the teacher may find ready a certain amount of written work on that construction together with review of the one or ones preceding.

With the oral drill action work is also used to a large extent as one means of giving the children both connected and natural language; e. g. Mary hands her pencil to Tom and says, "Please sharpen it for me." The pupil says Mary handed her pencil to Tom and asked him to sharpen it for her.

The teacher hands a book to Mary and says, "Read the first two stories." Miss Barr handed a book to Mary and told her to read the first two stories. She lights a fire in the toy stove and says to Tom, "Where is the coal hod?" Miss Barr lighted a fire and asked Tom where the coal hod was. Tom gets it and says, "Shall I fill it?" Tom got it and asked her if he should fill it.

This oral work on direct and indirect discourse also offers an opportunity for the use of and and but as illustrated in Lessons XXII., XXIII., and XXIV.

The harder work on the infinitive which is shown in Lesson IV. may at the teacher's discretion be postponed and taken as review work later after other constructions have been taught.

And again the construction — asked — if — is often begun before all the forms of — told — that — have been used.

In short with this as with other language work the teacher must adapt the general plan to the needs and ability of her class.

We wish to express our indebtedness to Mrs. Anna C. Hurd, whose outline of asked and told constructions forms the basis of these exercises, and to Miss Abby Tilden Baker, by whose suggestion and with whose help the lessons have been arranged.

CONTENTS

LESSON I.

— told — to —
— asked — to —

In this lesson the two easiest constructions, — told — to —, — asked — to —, are used; e. g., Miss Barr said to Tom, "Open the door." Miss Barr told Tom to open the door. She said to Mary, "Please shut the window." She asked Mary to shut the window.

LESSON II.

— told — not to —
— asked — not to —

In the second lesson the first two forms are reviewed and the negative introduced; e. g., Miss Barr said to Tom, "Do not write any more." Miss Barr told Tom not to write any more. She said to Mary, "Please do not slam the door." She asked Mary not to slam the door.

LESSON III.

Review of Lessons I. and II.

In each lesson some review of preceding constructions is given.

LESSON IV.

In this lesson the compound predicate is used, the constructions being the four already mentioned; e. g., Miss Barr said to Tom, "Get your cap and gloves. Please be quick." Miss Barr told Tom to get his cap and gloves and asked him to be quick.

LESSON V.

— told — that —

Here we introduce the construction — told — that —, using only the present and past tenses of the verb; e. g., Miss Barr said to Tom, "I want to see your stamp album." Miss Barr told Tom that she wanted to see his stamp album. She said to Mary, "I went down town after school." She told Mary that she went down town after school.

LESSONS VI., VII., AND VIII.

In these three lessons the same construction is used, the future tense of the verb being new and also the auxiliaries may, can, and must.

LESSON IX.

— asked — if —

The construction — asked — if — is taken up in this lesson; e. g., Miss Barr said to Tom, "Did you see Santa Claus?" Miss Barr asked Tom if he saw Santa Claus. She said to Mary, "Are you in a hurry?" She asked Mary if she was in a hurry.

LESSONS X., XI., XII., AND XIII.

The construction — asked — if — is continued, the future tense of the verb and the auxiliaries may, can, and must being used. The use of time words is also begun; e. g., Tom said to Miss Barr, "May I write a letter today?" Tom asked Miss Barr if he might write a letter that day. She said to him, "You may write one this afternoon." She told him that he might write one that afternoon.

LESSONS XIV. AND XV.

In these two lessons the construction is still — asked — if — with the answers Yes and No; e. g., Tom said to Miss Barr, "Do you like cats?" She said, "Yes." Tom asked Miss Barr if she liked cats and she told him that she did. Mary said to Miss Barr, "Shall I have a party?" Miss Barr said, "No." Mary asked Miss Barr if she would have a party and she told her that she would not.

LESSONS XVI., XVII., AND XVIII.

The interrogative pronouns are here taken up; e. g., Miss Barr said to Tom, "What have you in your hand?" Miss Barr asked Tom what he had in his hand.

LESSONS XIX. AND XX.

In these lessons the interrogative pronouns are continued and more time words given; as, Miss Barr said to Tom, "Where did you go yesterday?" Miss Barr asked Tom where he went the day before. She said, "I shall go to New York tomorrow." She told him that she would go to New York the next day.

LESSONS XXI. AND XXII.

These lessons give practice on sentences like the following: — Miss Barr said to Tom, "I don't like dogs. Do you?" Miss Barr told Tom that she did not like dogs and asked him if he did. Tom said to Mary, "Will you go home Christmas? I shall." Tom asked Mary if she would go home Christmas and told her that he would.

LESSONS XXIII. AND XXIV.

These lessons are designed for practice on the expression Thank you. e. g., Tom passed the candy to Mary and she said, "Thank you. It is very nice." Tom passed the candy to Mary and she thanked him and told him that it was very nice.

LESSONS XXV., XXVI., XXVII., AND XXVIII.

Incomplete answers are used in these four lessons; e. g., Tom said to Mary, "When will your mother come?" "Next week," said Mary. Tom asked Mary when her mother would come and she told him that she would come the next week. Tom said to Mary, "Can you go skating after school?" Mary said, "Perhaps." Tom asked Mary if she could go skating after school and she told him that perhaps she could.

LESSON XXIX.

The compound infinitive is used in this lesson; e. g., Mary said to Tom, "I want to have a party and invite all my friends." Mary told Tom that she wanted to have a party and invite all her friends.

LESSON XXX.

In this lesson the compound predicate is used; e. g., Mary said to Tom, "I sweep my room every day and take care of my bird." Mary told Tom that she swept her room every day and took care of her bird.

LESSON XXXI.

Review of Lessons XXIX. and XXX.

LESSONS XXXII., XXXIII., AND XXXIV.

These three lessons give practice in the use of and and but; e. g., Mary said to Tom, "Give me your knife." (He did not give it to her.) Mary told Tom to give her his knife but he didn't. Miss Barr said to Tom, "Don't forget your book." (He forgot it.) Miss Barr told Tom not to forget his book but he did. She said, "Do not sharpen your pencil." (He did not.) She told him not to sharpen his pencil and he did not. The possible combinations are as follows:—

— told / or / asked — to — and he did.

— told / or / asked — to — but he did not.

— told / or / asked — not to — and he did not.

— told / or / asked — not to — but he did.

LESSON XXXV.

The sentences in this lesson are to be changed to direct quotations.

LESSONS XXXVI., XXXVII., XXXVIII., AND XXXIX.

These are review lessons where the direct quotations change to the indirect, and the indirect to the direct.

LESSONS XL., XLI., XLII., AND XLIII.

These last four lessons are designed for original work by the children.

13. Agnes said, "I always pass them. Do you?"

14. Robert hung his head and said, "I failed in arithmetic last fall."

15. "What did your mother say?" Agnes asked. Robert told her that she made him study all the Christmas vacation.

16. "I shouldn't like that," Agnes said. Robert told her that he didn't.

17. Then he said, "What are you looking at?" She told him that she was watching some ants.

18. Robert asked her if they were fighting and she said, "They seem to be working very hard."

19. "Perhaps they are getting ready for winter," said Robert. Agnes asked him how they did that.

20. "They carry food into their houses and keep it," Robert answered.

21. Agnes asked him what food they carried in and he said, "I don't know."

22. Then Agnes said, "I shall ask my teacher to tell us about ants in school." Robert told her that he thought elephants were more interesting than ants.

23. Agnes asked him if he was interested in elephants and he told her that he was.

24. "Did you ever see one?" said Agnes. Robert told her that he saw one once.

25. "I saw some at the circus last month," said Agnes, "and I gave them some peanuts."

LESSON XXXVII.

1. "What else did you see at the circus?" said Robert. Agnes told him that she saw tigers, lions, camels, and a giraffe.

2. Robert asked her how the giraffe looked. She said, "It was spotted and had a very long neck."

3. "Were the tigers cross?" said Robert. Agnes told him that they looked rather cross.

4. Then she said, "I saw the man feed them." Robert asked her how he did it.

5. "He put big pieces of meat into the cage with a long fork," Agnes replied and Robert asked her if he fed the lions, too.

6. "Yes," said Agnes. Then she asked him if he ever went to the circus.

7. Robert told her that he never did. She said, "You must come to the city and go with me."

8. "Father is going to take me next week," said Robert. Agnes told him that she wanted to go, too.

9. He asked her if the animals did tricks and she said, "Some of them did."

10. "What did they do?" said Robert. Agnes told him that a monkey rode horseback.

11. Then she said, "A small elephant rode a tricycle." Robert asked her what she liked best of all.

12. Agnes said, "I liked to see the men ride horseback best." Robert asked her how they rode.

13. "They stood up on the horses' backs," she said, "and jumped through hoops."

14. Robert told her that he would like to do that and she said, "Can you ride horseback at all?"

15. "Of course I can," said Robert. "Can you?"

16. "I never tried," said Agnes. Then Robert told her that he would teach her.

17. She asked him who taught him to ride and he said, "Father."

18. "Teach me now." said Agnes. Robert told her that the horse was gone.

19. She asked him where it was and he said, "Father drove it to the village."

20. "I will teach you tomorrow," said Robert, and she thanked him.

21. Just then Robert's mother called them and Agnes said, "Must we go back now?" "Yes," said Robert.

22. His mother asked them if they were hungry and they both said, "Yes."

23. She asked them what they wanted for dinner and Robert said, "Strawberry shortcake."

24. She told him to run out to the garden and pick some berries and Agnes said, "I will help you."

25. They picked a big dishful and then Robert said, "Have we enough?" Agnes told him that she thought they had.

2. Gladys asked him if they could go the next day. He said, "Perhaps." Mrs. Fuller told him that she wanted to go, too. Mildred said, "Can we stay all day, mother?"

3. Mr. Fuller said, "I will take you all tomorrow. Do you want me to get you anything today?" "Thank you. No," said his wife.

5. Gladys asked him to get a sweater for her Teddy bear, a hat for her doll, and some slippers for herself. He said, "Wait until tomorrow and buy your things yourself."

6. "I haven't much money," said Gladys, "and I want to keep it for some beads." Her father told her that she must earn some money. She asked him how she could earn some.

7. He told her that she could wipe the dishes for her mother. She said, "How much will you pay me for that?" He told her that he would give her five cents.

8. "That will not buy a sweater," said Gladys. "What else can I do?" Her mother said, "You can feed the cat every day for a week." Gladys told her that she would try to remember.

9. Mildred said, "I'm sorry for the poor cat. She will be pretty thin in a week." Her father laughed and told her that she could give it a lunch sometimes.

10. "I'm going to get Tabby a new pink ribbon," said Mildred. "I have a dollar." Gladys asked her what else she would buy. Mildred said, "A toy balloon and some firecrackers for July 4th."

13. "Will you go with us?" she said. He told her that he thought he could. Gladys clapped her hands and said to

Mildred, "Papa is going, too. Do you suppose he will get us some ice cream?"

14. Mildred told her that she was greedy. "What does that mean?" said Gladys. "It means selfish," said Mildred. "Do you like to be selfish?"

15. Gladys pouted and said, "You like ice cream as well as I do." Mildred told her that she didn't ask for it every time she went to the city. Gladys said, "You always eat some."

16. "Don't quarrel, please," said their mother. "I want you to help me this morning." The girls said, "What shall we do?" Their father told them that they could find his gloves for him then.

17. Gladys said, "Where did you leave them?" He told her that he didn't know. Mildred said, "I will look up stairs." Her mother told her that she
